

ORIENT EXPRESS

SAILING YACHTS

MEDITERRANEAN 2026-2027

TECHNOLOGICAL MARVEL

BY VIANNEY VAUTIER, NAVAL ARCHITECT & CHIEF OPERATING OFFICER

THE CORINTHIAN IS A TRIUMPH OF MODERN NAVAL DESIGN. CREATED BY NAVAL ARCHITECT VIANNEY VAUTIER, THIS VESSEL STANDS AS A BEACON OF WHAT’S POSSIBLE WHEN TECHNOLOGY AND ARTISTRY COME TOGETHER. ITS SAIL-POWERED JOURNEY OFFERS BOTH ELEGANCE AND SUSTAINABILITY, ENSURING AN EXPERIENCE THAT IS AS FORWARD-THINKING AS IT IS TIMELESS.

REINVENTING THE ART OF SAILING

Redefining an entire generation of sailing vessels is no small feat, especially when large merchant sailing ships began vanishing from the seas over a century ago. With the dominance of motor yachts, the science and romance of wind-powered travel seemed almost forgotten.

The development of the Orient Express Sailing Yachts project brought a unique set of challenges, as today’s safety, crew, and efficiency standards are vastly different from those of traditional sailing ships. Even hull designs have transformed-from the sleek, streamlined forms designed for trade wind routes to bulkier shapes built for heavy cargo.

Designing a 1,500-square-meter (16,145-square-feet) sail posed another formidable task; most sailmakers abandoned the idea due to the immense forces involved. Yet, the engineers at Chantiers de l’Atlantique embraced the challenge, creating a patented sail using carbon fiber-reinforced glass panels instead of standard woven cloth. The entire rigging is fully automated, ensuring optimal performance with minimal crew input.

This innovative sail plan, paired with powerful hull lines, gives Corinthian its unmistakable silhouette and remarkable performance on the open sea.

STABILITY WITHOUT COMPROMISE

Unlike most sailboats that tilt under the force of the wind, the Corinthian remains steady and level. This may seem counterintuitive, but the yacht’s stability comes from a calculated balance of weight and width. With a 25.2-meter (82.7-feet) beam and a weight exceeding 16,000 metric tons (17,637 tons), the Corinthian is built to sail smoothly without heeling.

ELECTRIC PROPULSION FOR MAXIMUM EFFICIENCY

To optimize efficiency, the Corinthian is fitted with electric propulsion motors and variable pitch propellers with full feathering capabilities. This sophisticated system continuously adjusts the propeller pitch and RPM to match the prevailing wind conditions, ensuring maximum efficiency.

ECO-CONSCIOUS FOCUS

The Corinthian also incorporates state-of-the-art technologies to minimize its environmental footprint, from advanced engine emissions controls to onboard waste treatment systems.

Fresh water is generated onboard, reducing the need for excess storage weight. After use, wastewater undergoes advanced treatment to ensure no pollutants enter the ocean. An innovative sensor system, equipped with high-resolution cameras and AI, detects marine life beneath the surface to prevent accidental encounters with wildlife.
